With so much amazing animated content flowing out Europe nowadays, it is fitting that the continent now has its own award show dedicated specifically to the art form.

This afternoon in London, the nominees were revealed for the highly anticipated first-ever European Animation Awards. Peter Lord, president of the European Animation Awards association (and Aardman Animations co-founder), made the announcement.

A testament to the current strength of European feature animation, four animated features tied for the most nominations (three apiece): Michael Dudok de Wit's The Red Turtle, Claude Barras' My Life As A Zucchini, Rémi Chayé's Long Way North, and Roger Mainwood's Ethel & Ernest.

On the television side, Cartoon Network's The Amazing World of Gumball led the way with four nominations, followed by Revolting Rhymes, the half-hour BBC animation special produced by Magic Light Pictures and Triggerfish Animation Studios, which earned three noms.

A total of 48 nominees were selected from over 500 submissions. The winners will be announced at the Emile Awards, set to take place December 8 in Lille, France, at Le Nouveau Siècle Theatre.

In addition to the voting categories, the EAA also introduced a juried award, the Lotte Reiniger Achievement Award, rewarding an individual in
